In brief

Music streaming apps are the second most popular and used apps after social media apps in the market today. Mobile users have many options to select from, from live videos to internet radio stations and music streaming of all artists.

Music streaming apps are the second most popular and used apps after social media apps in the market today. Mobile users have many options to select from, from live videos to internet radio stations and music streaming of all artists. However, you need to understand that it is not easy to choose the right one from the plethora of music apps for your Android device.

Are you looking for the best music streaming apps for your Android phones? If yes, then here are the top music streaming apps for Android handpicked by us for you.

Amazon Music

Amazon music is one of the most popular and recognizable music streaming apps available for Android users worldwide. The best thing about Amazon prime music is that it is free for prime subscribers. Users can stream music from famous and not-so-famous artists such as The Dirtbombs and Bruno Mars, respectively.

This music streaming app for Android only misses some popular artists but lets you import music files without any issues. As a user, you can comment and listen on tracks, share them with your friends, and download if available. Amazon Music is mainly for those users who like to discover new talented artists before anyone else.

Spotify

Spotify is also one of the most used music streaming apps for Android, which offers a free and paid subscription to its users worldwide. This music streaming Android app is perfect for mobile users because you can download any song you want in the catalog for offline listening on your smartphone. There is also a desktop app and web player, and all your playlists and content will be synced between them.

It also offers integration with your music library with more than 10 million songs. You can find out more about Spotify promotion and easily share your favorite music with your friends, post the songs to the social media sites, and highlight your songs. For more features and options, you can go for the premium plan of Spotify. By going for the premium plan, you can enjoy the entire music library offered by Spotify.

Gaana

Gaana is the best music streaming app for all your music needs. It provides you unlimited and free online access to all your favorite Hindi Songs, Bollywood music, and Regional songs. You can download songs of your favorite singers easily without any hassle.

Users will get an ad-free music experience, and the audio quality is great. You can experience the app in 10 different languages. You can subscribe to Gaana by paying just Rs 99 per month, and it can be renewed through your Google pay account.

Conclusion

Finally, you are aware of the best music streaming apps you can download for your Android devices. I would suggest everyone first try Amazon music due to its great features and no restriction to the users. You can also enjoy music in the white and black theme. It is also an affordable and not much expensive streaming app for the users.
