Bottom line

As the competition in the telecom sector getting stronger after the entry of Jio, major companies such as Airtel, Vodafone and Idea changed their strategies to keep themselves alive in the game. As a result these companies recently implemented the monthly recharge system and thus disposed the lifetime validity scheme.

As the competition in the telecom sector getting stronger after the entry of Jio, major companies such as Airtel, Vodafone and Idea changed their strategies to keep themselves alive in the game. As a result these companies recently implemented the monthly recharge system and thus disposed the lifetime validity scheme.

Due to the new implementation, users have to do recharge every month with any available plan vouchers to keep their number active. If no recharge done on time, outgoing call facility will be blocked first, followed by incoming call after 15 days. Finally after 90 days the operator have the right to disconnect the service too.

User can choose any unlimited plan or minimum recharge plan starting from Rs. 35 to keep their number active. You can check the list of available minimum recharge plans available in various network. If you wish to recharge with unlimited packs, you can choose below pack depends on the network.
