Can I Use Paramount Plus On My Old Samsung TV?

Paramount Plus is only supported by the Tizen operating system (2017 models or later version). Not all Samsung TV models, especially the older ones, support Paramount+. However, the good news is that you can still use Paramount+ on your old Samsung TV. Here's how:

1: Use a Streaming Device

If your older Samsung TV does not support Paramount Plus, you can still watch it by using a streaming device. Popular streaming devices like Roku stick, Amazon Firestick, Apple TV, or Google Chromecast offer Paramount Plus.

If you already own one of these streaming devices, simply connect them to your Samsung TV's HDMI port. Further, turn on the streaming device and change your TV's input source to the HDMI cable connected to the streaming device.

Finally, you can watch your favourite shows and movies on Paramount Plus through the streaming device.

2: Sync Your Device to the Samsung TV

Another solution suggests that if you don't have a streaming device, there's no need to purchase one. Instead, you can use screen sharing to send content from your mobile device or computer to your Samsung TV while using the Paramount Plus app.

Both wired HDMI connections and wireless screen sharing are supported. This way, you can mirror your mobile device or computer screen to your Samsung TV, allowing you to watch Paramount Plus content on the larger screen without needing an external streaming device.

These options should help you enjoy Paramount Plus on your older Samsung TV, even if it doesn't natively support the app.
