Right now, more and more people are looking for ways to make some extra money. Sure, having a side hustle is nothing new. But the coronavirus and Covid-19 pandemic has put more people in need of extra cash than usual. Why? Well, the government rules and guidelines that have been put in place to try to slow and minimize the spread of the virus have had a huge impact on businesses of all shapes and sizes and across all industries.

Many businesses have been told that they have to close. Many businesses that can remain open have had to limit capacity, which means fewer sales and less profit. This has resulted in mass job loss, redundancies, and employers only being able to offer reduced salaries or hours to keep themselves afloat.

This, in turn, has resulted in the jobless not having money to spend and those with jobs being more reluctant to spend in case they face a similar fate. This has resulted in further business and financial struggles. If you've found yourself implicated in any of these types of situations, you may be looking for ways to make some extra cash. If you're interested in tech, you may want to go down a tech route when doing so. Here are some suggestions that could help you along the way.

Cryptocurrency

Cryptocurrency can seem a bit daunting and intimidating when you first get into it. It's a field that many of us have never ventured into, but it is also one where you could make a whole lot of money! A cryptocurrency is a form of currency that is digital or virtual and you can trade it to make a profit. This is complex, but you will get used to it. To get started, look into crypto exchange sites like Swyftx who can convert your cash into cryptocurrency to get started!

Professional Gaming

Are you into gaming? A lot of us have found ourselves with a lot more time to practice lately. Why? Well, we may not have been working, or we are being advised to spend time indoors during our free time, so activities like gaming have experienced skyrocketing popularity. If you're actually any good, you may want to consider professional gaming.

Sure, this may sound odd. But there is a lot of money to be made in this. Take a look into Esports. Put simply, Esports stands for "electronic sports" and it is an area that takes standard gaming up to professional levels.

It is competitive gaming that can come hand in hand with cash prizes, as well as sponsorships from renowned gaming brands. Some people start their own online channels, attracting a fanbase and getting donations or contributions from fans who want to watch them play, talk about games, and more.

So, these are just a couple of techy areas to consider. Hopefully, one or the other will appeal to you and get you off to a headstart. But even if they're not for you, they should help to get your imagination going and get you started out in the right direction!
