With the advent of technology, the human living style has been changed completely. Different search engines have made the world global village. Sitting in your room, you can access any information you want. You can watch videos in various genres and play games in your leisure hours.

Where many other technologies have been introduced to the world, e-commerce is one of its kind. You can build your online store on any top e-commerce sites, including Shopify and WooCommerce, if you have set up your store on Shopify and are no longer interested in continuing on this due to many reasons behind it. Feeling overwhelmed isn't a bad thing as everyone cannot enjoy everything, so is your case.

If you are thinking about Shopify to WooCommerce migration, this can be the best idea. But are you stuck in the process of migration? Guess what? You're no longer exposed to this anxiety as Cart2cart can be your best partner in performing this task for you.

Without wasting any time, let's discuss the steps you can follow to migrate from Shopify to WooCommerce.

1. Export data

This seems quite a time-consuming and tough task to perform, but it's not that much difficult as it looks. You need only to practice the process, and you are good to go for the manual process. First, import the data from the Shopify admin, and you can select the data you want to import. All data can be imported, or you can choose the selected portion in your data.

The file will be downloaded, and you can get that file by clicking on the continue button. Don't stop the process until the import process is completed. Shopify is chosen as the source cart, and you have to provide the URL of that Shopify store.

Hire an expert: If you don't want to do this process manually and want to utilize this time somewhere else, you can hire an expert who will do this task for you. There are many platforms where you can find the best expert and do this task without worrying about the process. Before hiring, go to a live call and discuss the prices based on the experience, and you'll be good to go with the professional you have hired.

2. Connect your WooCommerce store

Here comes the step where you have to specify the WooCommerce store with the URL and make a bridge to import the data. And this can be successfully done by installing the Cart2Cart extension and let the process proceed further without wasting any time.

An alternative solution is that you can do this process manually, too, if you don't want to install an extension in WordPress, but using the extension is the best choice.

Why Cart2Cart is the best choice for importing your data to WooCommerce?
