In brief

Are you looking for mobile app games that you can also play in person? Online games are a significant part of our lives now.

Are you looking for mobile app games that you can also play in person? Online games are a significant part of our lives now. They became even more popular after Covid hit. We were forced to stay indoors and stay busy, so we played as many games as possible.

Now that things are slowly turning back to normal, we still want to play these games. However, we also want to spend time with our friends and family. The trick here is to combine the two activities.

There's a chance that you no longer want to play online games when you meet with friends. Yet you want to share in the same fun you had during the lockdown period. So It creates the need to have mobile app games that you can also play in person.

However, with so many games available on Google Play and App Store, what are some exciting games you can play on your mobile and play in person?

Scrabble

Scrabble is an old favorite. The game was first created in 1931 by Alfred Mosher Butts, and it was called Criss Cross. However, James Brunot redesigned it and renamed it Scrabble in 1948, and it has since been a game that people from all over the world love.

Now, you can buy the physical version of scrabble or download the mobile version on whatever device you are using. So whether you are playing the online version or the physical game, you can still have your friends share in the same fun as you.

The great thing about playing the online version is that you can save your history and play with people worldwide. Moreover, if you want to play alone, you can also play against a computer through different difficulty levels.

Cards

Remember when we all used to get together and play cards all day long? It didn't matter what game we were playing as long as there was a deck of cards.

Playing cards has been a human activity for thousands of years. But, initially, we only had the physical deck of cards that we could only play with friends or other people. Only on limited occasions were we able to play by ourselves.

There are many variations, many of which can be played both online and offline. The online versions allow you to play different games with people from all over the world using the same rules as those in physical games.

Various games are available, from classic card games to high-level solitaire games. Some of the card games available for online users include:

- Texas Hold'em
- Classic Solitaire
- BlackJack
- Forty Thieves

It no longer matters whether you are by yourself in the house or with your friend and family. You can play any version you want as long as you get willing players.

Pool Table

The pool table is a fun and interactive game that has been around for years. However, while it is a great game to get together, it comes with certain restraints such as a heavy table and long cue sticks that would not work well with everyone.

Now, you can carry your pool table in your pocket. Then, you can download it on your mobile phone and play with your friends regardless of their location.

This lightweight version of the game uses the same rules without looking for a table or buying one. You don't even have to download the game to your phone and computer. Instead, you can play the game online and still enjoy the same benefits.

Poker

Poker is a popular and exciting game for many people around the world. If you are interested in Poker, you understand how it is played and the requirements to set up a successful poker game.

As with most games that require setting up, there are times when you might not be in a position to play. This is where the online version of poker comes into play. Online Poker uses the same rules as physical poker and allows you to play with your friends or other people worldwide.

Chess

Chess is one of the oldest board games in the world. It is also popular enough to have people from all over the world competing at national levels.

Chess was among the first board games to be converted into an online version, allowing the pairing of different players worldwide. In addition, there are currently different apps offering chess games that will let you play with different people, monitor your progress, and store all your plays.

Conclusion

Some games don't have online versions of themselves. Some are more fun being played in person because of their activities. A great example is Spikeball that requires spikeball sets.

Whether they exist in the online version, in-person games are a great way to bond with our friends. We don't just play the games, we share memories, laughter, and jokes as we play.
